40 Developmental Assets - Developmental Asset #8 - Youth as Resources - March 1, 2017

Youth are given useful and meaningful roles at home and in the community.

- Are youth included in all decisions that affect them?
- Do we consider roles for youth volunteers other than helping to set up or pick up trash?
- Do we consider youth as volunteers for anything other than events?
- Have youth been invited to participate on agency boards and committees?

About February 1, an 18-year-old Bear River HS student who wanted to do her senior project on the Red Cross became an official Red Cross volunteer. The date for an initial chat turned out to be in the middle of the shelter operation at the Fairgrounds to which the chat was relocated (shelter operation was evacuation of Oroville and other communities due to dam spillway structural integrity concerns). Student was given a tour and a few shelter tasks, and decided she would like to be regular shelter volunteer the following day, to start at 6:45 AM. Because of a miscommunication among older, experienced adults, she was the only Red Cross person in the shelter from ~7:00 - 8:00 AM. Later that day she interviewed, with guidance, a family who lost their home to a fire, and assisted them in getting clothing and food at the shelter. The following afternoon (Thursday) without much time before school ended, she arranged for use and access to 30,000 sq. ft. with heat at BRHS over the holiday weekend. Every task she did as well or better than older adults would have done.
