The Learning Community series will continue to focus on promoting resilience using a trauma-informed approach, emphasizing partnerships with behavioral health systems. Together we will explore successful approaches to support the behavioral health needs of children and families living in rural communities.

Featured Speakers:

LORI CHELIUS, MBA & MPH, partner in Origins Training, will help us formulate a vision for agencies and communities to develop a trauma-informed approach that supports improved behavioral health outcomes. We will learn a process to evaluate needs, assess resources and barriers, and identify resilience champions.

OSCAR C. PEREZ PhD, founder of Tending The Fires, will focus on the importance of developing a culturally competent and inclusive system that addresses inter-generational trauma and engages non-traditional partners.

MATT BRUFLODT, Information Specialist, will take us on a tour of the Rural Information Hub, a website that highlights evidence based behavioral health programs meeting the needs of citizens in rural areas across America.

Come network with other local professionals to identify concrete actions toward developing a behavioral health system that fosters resilient families, agencies, and communities.
