

Connectivity and Care: Explorations of Culturally Responsive Practices Based on The Science of Child Development

2/8, 2/15, and 2/22/2022
from 6:00pm to 8:00pm

Kathleen & Senta have over 30 years as leaders in community cross-sector collaboration. In their unique co-director style, they unite their voices to engage multi-disciplinary participants in an educational and multi-cultural approach to leadership training, strategic planning, and exploring critical issues through courageous conversations, developing reflective practice, and cultural humility.

This interactive virtual experience weaves together essential knowledge and day to day methods for anti-racist practices, culturally responsive care, based on the science of child development to strengthen and sustain equitable learning environments and actions in early childhood. Educators will experience courageous conversations, high-level learning activities, and real-life strategies to honor and support their professional development and deepen their quality of care for very young children.
